The Game in New Hampshire.

The scheme of the Republican leaders to cut the State out of the Union, and maintain control over the State in defiance of that will, is indicated, and the plan marked out in the Governor's call of a special session of the present (old) Legislature. The body thus called to meet in special session, after it had become virtually defunct, and when the new body is on the eve of meeting, is Republican in both branches, while in the new Legislature—elected the House is Democratic. It is true the Republicans claim that, when the 40 conditionally chosen members on "irrevocable" terms are admitted, they will have a majority; but it is not ascertained whether these 40 persons are entitled to seats, or not, the question depending on whether the districts in which they were chosen had full population quotas under the new census—and a precedent established in a precisely similar case by the Republicans themselves 10 years ago, when they were in the majority. The present Legislature should decide the question in advance, and this is why the House prevailed upon the weak-minded Governor, Goodell, to call it to meet in special session.

The roll of the House in which up to the clerk of the preceding one, who must observe the law and the settled precedents and practices. The clerk of the present House has, since the adjournment of the Legislature, removed from the State and taken up his residence in Maine, but this does not disqualify him from making up the roll of members, and acting in the organization of the new House. Since the adjournment of the Legislature, the House has been a Republican, and is afraid to trust the new House to choose its own temporary clerk—and, therefore, he has formed the Governor to call the Legislature together in special session at a large cost to the State, for the simple purpose of having the House choose a clerk who acts for a single day.

Of course, the scheme involves the choice of a clerk who is a creature of Chandler's, and who will do as he tells him. The stakes to be played for are large—the Governor's salary, the salary of the Senate to succeed Senator Blair, and control of the State for two years—and Chandler and the Republican leaders with the lawless and hard-boiled party that stole the Presidency in 1877.—St. Joseph Ballot.

The Costs of Pensions.

The great surplus in the treasury when the democrats gave up the government to the republicans two years ago, says the Louisville Courier-Journal, is almost exhausted. Only a few millions remain, and extraordinary large deficiency bills will be reported this winter. The deficiency on account of pensions will be enormous. Up to date there has been $84,000,000 drawn out of the treasury for pensions since July 1. About $19,000,000 of this sum was drawn this month, and it is hoped at the department that there will be no more drafts before January. Upon this basis it is estimated that the expenditures for pensions during the whole year will be $140,000,000 or $150,000,000. But the year has not yet begun, and the expenditures for the first quarter of the year have amounted to about $44,000,000. This, carried out for the four quarters, would make the expenditures for the year $176,000,000, to meet which less than $100,000,000 have been appropriated. Meanwhile the number of pensioners is steadily increasing, and the deficiency may be greater than $50,000,000. The government will be compelled to issue new bonds before the close of the fiscal year of '91-'92.

The celebrated Blue Room at the White House has been the scene of the furnishing and decorations for the past few weeks, and glowing descriptions are now being sent out of the beauties that have been wrought and the large sums of money that have been expended in making this little reception room more attractive than it ever was, even when it had been arranged by the good taste of Mrs. Gover Cleveland. What has not been before published, however, is the fact that an attempt was made by Mr. Russell Harrison, the son of the President, to convert the refurnishing of the room into a source of cash for the benefit of the newspaper of which he is a part owner. The decorating has been done by a firm in Hartford, of which a Mr. Yergerson is a member. This gentleman has authority for the statement that Russell Harrison approached him in the Executive Mansion a few days ago and suggested that his firm pay the sum of $500 to Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper for the privilege of having published in it an illustrated and exclusive description of the decorations of the historic blue room. Mr. Harrison offering assurances at the same time that steps would be taken by the proper persons at the White House to prevent the room's being shown to any one until after the illustrated advertisement should appear. Mr. Yergerson says he considered the proposition, but did not accept it, having determined that he could get all the necessary advertising for nothing.—N. Y. Sun.
